HELSINKI, Finland—(AP)—Simultaneous Russian attacks on both ends of the Mannerheim line, throwing two Red army divisions against one sector alone, were repulsed in fighting that lasted far into the night, Finland reported Wednesday.

The Red army snatched at the western end of the isthmus defense line, and the eastern sector, where two divisions launched the attack.

The twin offensive meant the Russians were trying to break through across nearly the entire width of the isthmus, and that the battle still is most critical for Finland.

Finnish hopes were raised by the onset of a blizzard which is expected to balk the Russian drive and further strengthen the defense.

BUCHAREST, Rumania—(AP)—Pressure by Britain and France was reported authoritatively Wednesday to have led the Rumanian government to decree the banning of shipment of aviation oil to Germany.

Reds Bomb Swedes
STOCKHOLM, Sweden—(AP)—Seven Russian bombing planes Wednesday showered between 30 and 40 bombs on the Swedish frontier village of Pajala, setting many buildings afire but causing no casualties, dispatches from the border region reported.

Four buildings were destroyed and others set afire by the raiders, who descended to 3,000 feet before unloading their bomb cargoes.

Pajala is five miles from the Finnish frontier.

ISTANBUL, Turkey—(AP)—Hundreds of Russian technical experts employed in Turkish industry for many years under a Turkish-Russian agreement were ordered by the Moscow government Wednesday to return to Russia immediately.

This action followed a gradual liquidation by Russia of its commercial organizations in Turkey.

British Over Germany
LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—The air ministry announced Wednesday that British warplanes carried out a successful reconnaissance flight over Helgoland light, off Germany's north-west coast, Tuesday night.

A Berlin communique had previously reported a flight of "several enemy planes from the west and northwest" over the light, which contains the naval base Helgoland.

The first recorded strike in America took place in 1786 when Philadelphia journeymen printers quit to enforce demands for a minimum scale of $6 a week.

Finland, Its Birth a Mystery, Survives 600 Years' Warfare

Map shows how Russian troops are driving into the Finnish defenses on the Mannerheim line in the most intensive attacks of the war. Key to the Finnish defenses, according to military experts, are the "anchor fortresses" at either end of the line, which Finland must hold if she is to keep the Russians out.

Nevada County Test Cores at 5,960 Feet

STAMPS, Ark.—(The Texas Canadian-Stocks No. 1, lime wildest nine miles north of Stamps in Nevada county, was cored Tuesday at a depth of 5,960-5965 feet in red shale and anhydrite.

If the well is a producer it will mean extensive drilling activities in this little explored section, oil scouts affirmed. The well is in the Falcon field in Nevada county in section 9-15-22.

The Buckner zone was topped 1200 feet higher than wells in the Buckner field, six miles south. Indications were regarded as highly favorable for a producer. It is expected to be completed by Wednesday or Thursday. Much interest has been aroused in the area.

Four

Syd McMath, cashier of First National Bank of Hope, was elected secretary-treasurer of Group Four, Arkansas Bankers Association, at its annual convention held in Arkadelphia Tuesday.

C. C. Spragins, cashier of Citizens National Bank of Hope, attended the meeting with Mr. McMath.

Approximately 200 officials and representatives of 75 banks attended.

One of the principal items of business was the division of the group and the formation of Group 5. Of the original 24 counties, 13 remain in Group 4. They are Sevier, Little River, Miller, Lafayette, Hempstead, Columbia, Clark, Howard and Pike. In the new group are Grant, Dallas, Bradley, Ashley, Chicot, Desha, Lincoln, Jefferson, Arkansas, Drew and Cleveland counties.

William A. McConnell, Little Rock, president of the Arkansas Bankers Association; Robert Moore, Brinkley, president of the Junior Division of the A. B. A.; Robert E. Wait, Little Rock, secretary of the state group; Grover S. Jorjanning, state bank commissioner; W. A. Hicks, Little Rock, president of the Peoples National bank, and J. W. Bellamy, assistant cashier, Simmons National bank, Pine Bluff, gave addresses.

Over the Karelian Isthmus and around Lake Ladoga, scene of the present heavy fighting, these first Finns came, hunters, trappers, like the first American pioneers. By the eighth century they had settled three parts of Finland and the country's history really had begun.

They were building log cabins, starting an agriculture, composing songs of their heroes when the Vikings raided first about the ninth century. The Vikings passed on to Russia but they carried a story back to Sweden. And from that story Finland's contact with Sweden began.

King Eric made it, together with an Englishman, Henry Bishop of Uppsala. They led the first Swedish Crusade to Finland in 1154, forcing Christianity on the Finns "by fire and sword," for which a peasant killed Henry. Sweden, eventually, annexed all of Finland as a buffer against Russia.

Battleground for Russo-Swedish Wars
"From this time onward," says Jackson, "Finland became the battleground of the two warring states of Sweden and Russia." It was to know no peace for centuries.

But the Swedish conquest was fortunate in that it saved the Finns from the Germans "who had enslaved Livonia and Estonia . . . from the Tartars who conquered Russia." The Swedes raised the Finnish culture before them.

Finland, Its Birth a Mystery, Survives 600 Years' Warfare

FINLAND—The race nobody knows! Beginning in mystery, trekking north 2000 years ago, meeting with the Swedes to form still another people, resigned, fighting, passive, aroused, cautious, courageous; neighborly but hating all Russians.

Finns—a people definitely apart! So J. Hampden Jackson pictures them in an important book, "Finland," just published by Macmillan. The Finns, says Jackson, have been neglected by the historians. But their story is epic.

Finland's Whole History Is Story of Fighting
The Finns have survived incredibly long hardship, oppression, conquest, of which the current Russian attack is but one familiar chapter.

Finland was a buffer, state, a battleground between Russia and Sweden, between east and west for six centuries. Finland was a vassal province of Russia for 100 years thereafter. With the World War it won independence but the struggle went on, against both Communist revolution and Fascist putsch. And today Finland is still fighting, one of democracy's smallest but stoutest outposts.

The epic of Finland is like that. It begins in the first Christian century. But dimly.

"Who the Finns are we do not know," asserts Jackson, "all that can be said with any certainty is that they are a race apart, being related to neither Teutons, Slavs or Mongols. Whence they came originally is equally doubtful."

Believed Related to Fighting
Magyars
It is supposed they migrated from the lands between the Urals and the Volga. Some of them, Magyars, turned south and settled in the fertile Hungarian plain. Others turned north. And in the north they found Finland, driving the few scattered Lapps before them.

Over the Karelian Isthmus and around Lake Ladoga, scene of the present heavy fighting, these first Finns came, hunters, trappers, like the first American pioneers. By the eighth century they had settled three parts of Finland and the country's history really had begun.

They were building log cabins, starting an agriculture, composing songs of their heroes when the Vikings raided first about the ninth century. The Vikings passed on to Russia but they carried a story back to Sweden. And from that story Finland's contact with Sweden began.

Here's New Name for Red's Attack

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Members of the house banking committee established something of a record for understatement while trying to describe Russia's attack on Finland without calling it a war.

The legislators began referring to the conflict as an "altercation" operation and "trouble" after hearing Green H. Hackworth, state department legal adviser testify during hearings on the Finnish loan bill that neither the United States nor any other nation had designated it formally as war.

Representative Wolcott (R-Mich) drew the biggest laugh when he called it "this unpleasantness."

WARREN, Ark.—(AP)—Federal agents drew from a 23-year-old prisoner here Wednesday the weird story of a crime partnership with a convicted killer's wife that resulted in the hitch-hike slaying of a Houston (Texas) traveling salesman.

E. L. Richmond, agent in charge of the Little Rock office of the FBI, announced that the prisoner, bookie as Harold Finnon Burks, confessed early Wednesday his part in the killing of a Salesman Joseph Calloway near Lake Charles, La., last Wednesday.

Arrested at Warren
WARREN, Ark.—(AP)—Federal state officers quietly arrested here late Tuesday a 23-year-old man charged with the slaying of a traveling salesman by the government with being the missing male companion of Mrs. Claude D. Henry, alleged slayer of a motorist near Lake Charles, La.

Agent E. L. Richmond, in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Little Rock, who announced the arrest, said the man denied any knowledge of the slaying of J. C. Calloway, Beaumont, Texas, salesman, or of Mrs. Henry who is in jail at Lake Charles.

Richmond described the prisoner as Harold Finnon Burks and said that federal charges of violating the national motor vehicle theft act and being a fugitive from justice had been filed against him at Shreveport La., Tuesday under his alias of William Lloyd Adams.

The federal agent said the man arrested here also was known as Finnon Horace Burks and Kermit Haggood. Richmond said the man had served a prison sentence at Huntsville, Texas; under the name of Lloyd Adams on a charge of attempted burglary in Henderson county Texas.

Jones Nominated by 20,000 Votes, Nearly Complete

12-Year Long Dynasty
Ended in Louisi-

AMATEUR WINNER
Jones, Lake Charles Lawyer, Political Newcomer

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)—The Huey P. Long political dynasty, born of 12 years of dictatorial violence, died peacefully by the ballot Tuesday after one of the longest and bitterest election campaigns in state history.

Unofficial returns from 1,508 of the state's 1,703 precincts gave: Jones 258,816.

Long 238,592.

The voters in the Democratic gubernatorial run-off primary swept to defeat Governor Earl Long, brother of the "kingfish," and titular leader of the machine, and nominated Attorney Sam Jones, Lake Charles, for governor.

Jones, a newcomer to politics, pledged himself to restore democracy to Louisiana, to regain much of the millions of dollars he said administration office-holders had stolen from the state, and to jail those found guilty of graft and corruption.

The machine route appeared complete with Jones' slate and the secondary slate of state officers engaged in the run-off going in without a break, together with the new anti-machine legislature, and possibly an anti-machine state central committee.

Jones Lead Grows
NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—The tabulation Wednesday morning on Louisiana's gubernatorial run-off primary election, 1,481 precincts out of 1,703, stood:

Jones 254,880.

Long 234,274.

Jones Takes Lead
NEW ORLEANS —(AP)—Sam Houston Jones, who pledged himself to destroy the old Huey P. Long political machine in Louisiana, at midnight Tuesday appeared on the basis of incomplete and unofficial returns to have defeated Governor Earl K. Long in the bitter democratic gubernatorial state primary.

With approximately 150,000 of 500,000 votes yet to be counted, most of these in country parishes (counties) where Jones showed his greatest strength, the 42-year-old Lake Charles attorney was leading Long 182,390 votes to 174,536, and his lead was slowly mounting.

He had come from behind to overcome an early lead of about 15,000 votes given Long in the machine controlled New Orleans where the vote was almost complete at midnight.

The vote reported was from 1159 of the state's 1703 precincts, and represented a total vote of 358,000. It had been anticipated approximately a half million votes would be cast.

Why the Circus Can't Come to Town

FAIRBANKS, Alaska—P. Zoo and circus are unworkable in Fairbanks under a recently enacted ordinance.
The measure prohibits bringing to the city or harboring in it a captive or in any other manner, any bear, badger, coyote, lynx, wolf, or any other wild live animal of the nature.
It prohibits an old ordinance which prohibited anyone walking on the sidewalks, and was designed to end the growing habit of keeping young wolves and other predators in pet.

Security Through Annual Wages

Revised receiving an adequate pay check, the most comforting thing to the average worker is a reasonable assurance that he will continue to receive the same check next week and the week after. This is the kind of security that wages must provide.
The average worker is not a speculator, he is a worker. He wants to feel that he will be employed long enough each year to insure his family against sudden stoppage of income or pay insufficient to cover his normal needs.
Those who suffer most seriously from stoppage of pay checks are workers in the building trades, where seasonal rates of pay look good, but where annual pay never seems to add up to what they expect. Their employment is steady seasonal work, but they are lucky if they earn about $100 a year, although they may be working for $1.25 an hour.
Fully aware of this problem, which has threatened the financial security of their members, the building trades are grappling with a plan to assure workers of a specified annual wage. According to News Analyzer, Walter Thornton, nearly a million workers will be asked to decide on this issue during the next year.
Thornton outlined a typical work week to illustrate how the plan might work.
The average painter in Cleveland now gets $1.25 an hour, works an average of 25 weeks a year, collecting about $312.50 a year. Under the proposed plan, the painter would be guaranteed 52 weeks of steady work at an annual rate of $100. His hourly rate would fall from $1.25 to about $1.92, but he will have earned nearly $100 more at the end of the year.
These building trades men now earn more than the proposed standard wage naturally object to the plan. For these few, it would mean an annual decrease in wages. That would be the price of providing higher pay and a better form of security for the industry in general. Unions are not alone responsible for this plan, but they are helping to bring it about because of the decrease in the hourly rate. But many proposed union men, including many building trades union leaders, are actively supporting the proposal.
The plan for establishing annual wages is not new. It has long been accepted by certain groups as a means of setting up some minimum of security. President Roosevelt suggested it for the auto industry, but the automakers balked. Several individual employers have already set up systems whereby a fixed 52-week pay rate is deter-

Testimonial
They pictured her hand as a lovely thing
With pearly nails and a jeweled ring;
A hand unlined but soft and white,
And beautifully curved for men's delight.
A hand that proudly showed its grace
And idly moved through airy space,
I thought of one whose hand has toiled
For others, a hand that has scrubbed and boiled
Year after year to a whispered prayer,
And I thought of tomorrow over there
And wonder beyond the sunset bar
Which hand would hold the morning

Every family ought to work out some ways of building up Papa. Because most fathers of families need more building up than they get.

One way is to make his evening home-coming something pretty special. This can be accomplished just by having the children at home instead of scattered all over the neighborhood. And by Mama's taking time off from the stove to talk to him for five minutes.

There also should be a place for him to be by himself when he wants that. Mama can be alone sometime during the day, if it is only while the children have their afternoon naps, but Papa has to be with people all day long.

Also his hobbies ought to be made much of—not treated as silly and of no

Bob Taylor Grows a Mustache and Loses That Choir-Boy Look

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—The best thing that has happened to Bob Taylor in a long time is a mustache.

That isn't an isolated opinion. Mr. Taylor's mustache is attracting almost as much attention in Movietown as Orson Welles' beard. But while the latter patch of scrubby seems only to accentuate the youth and precocity of Mr. Welles, the short, smart cookie-duster worn by Mr. Taylor imparts a virile dash and maturity to a set of features which up to now have been reminiscent of a well-scrubbed choir boy.

Taylor's 28 years should be enough for a male star, but fans want their romantic heroes to look older, if not actually a little disolute. Young male theater patrons are less jealous, hence more approving, of the middle-aged, satchel-eyed, toupee-wearing Romeos. Taylor has suffered in the pretty-boy category for three years, and when he bared his torso and slugged his way through "The Crowd Roars" and "Stand Up and Fight," there were customers who snorted that it was no use for him to try to act tough.

Poor Roles Cut into His Prestige
The actor's own feeling is that he has been most handicapped by poor roles importance whatever. He ought to be encouraged to have his own friends, too—not conned to a social life that includes no one but Mama's friends and their husbands.

A Little Flattery Always Helps
It wouldn't hurt a bit if he would hear occasionally that he is a pretty good-looking guy. All women—regardless of their looks—get paid compliments occasionally—even if the compliments are only on a new hat. Men get few, except from their families.

Also their opinion should be asked on family questions, and not dismissed lightly after it is given. All too many men are told, not asked, about a family's decisions.

It is also a good thing for a family to take pride in Papa's work, whether it is especially glamorous or not. After all it is the thing that pays for everything the family has and enjoys.

The role of Papa could be made a whole lot more satisfying and flattering than it usually is if a family gave it some thought.

Important for Women

A weak, run-down condition often gives a foothold to functional dysmenorrhea, causing much periodical distress from headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain for women. CARDUI so often helps in such cases, for it sharpens appetite, boosts flow of gastric juices, so improves digestion, helps build physical resistance. CARDUI taken a few days before and during "the time," is another way to help periodic distress. Used 50 years.

States Selecting Delegate Slates

People Seldom Get Chance to Speak Own Minds
By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON—Significant among the political signs of the times is the fact that the presidential primary tussles are crashing Race One in mid-winter—and in competition with war news.

The front-page positions of headlines like "Dewey Enters Illinois Race," and "Farley Slate in Massachusetts," may mean that rank-and-file voters will have a chance to play an active practical role in selecting nominees for President.

If the "average voters" do, it will be the first time John Q. and Mary Jane Citizen have definitely participated in the presidential preliminaries on a nation-wide basis in 22 years. For it was in 1912 that the popular voice played hob with Republican primaries and gave Teddy Roosevelt's backers the courage to set up their candidate as an independent.

Voter's Influence Vague
Before 1912, and since, the influence of the rank and file in the trial runs has been indirect, vague, inconclusive.

The reason for their impotence during the candidate-hunting phase of presidential politics lies in the fact that the democratic way of nominating and electing is unsuited to smoking out candidates for office. It works smoothly only after the candidates have been picked and the final race is on. For instance, you can't actually draft a man who does not want to be drafted because, in so doing, you deprive him of the liberty to run or not to run, a liberty guaranteed by the democratic form of government.

That automatically leaves the selection of candidates to political parties, and, more especially, to the people who make a profession of running parties. Caucuses Used First

Party leaders first adopted the secret caucus system because it was already in practical use as a town-council method of picking candidates. Out of the national party caucuses in Washington candidates suddenly and mysteriously appeared. Voters had no choice but to pass on the caucus selections of both parties.

About 1825, the caucus died the death of a political villain and the convention system supplanted it. In the convention, the parties were supposed to select their candidates openly. But soon the evils of the caucus appeared in the form of the "smoke-filled back room," and cliques were charged with manipulating conventions like Punch and Judy shows.

Around the turn of the century the political primary idea evolved, almost or the evils in the convention system. ache and the excellent story to bolster his faltering popularity. This is Vivien Leigh's second American picture. In it she's a ballet dancer who falls in love with Taylor while he's waiting in London to be sent to the Western Front in the first World War. He goes, and by error is reported killed. The girl, with heart and moral values shattered becomes a prostitute. Her lover's unexpected return only heightens the tragedy.

Next picture for Taylor will be "Flight Command," an action-aviation yarn aboard a navy airplane carrier, sounds fine. But I think he's a little worried about the following assignment "Quo Vadis," as a Technicolor super-duper. He said, "I suppose I'll have to run around in a sort of night-gown."

That's right, Mr. Taylor. Worse yet, for you, the early Christians in decadent Rome didn't wear British-decor mustaches.

Under the primary system, the idea was to control political parties under state laws, and make them quasi-public organizations.

Primary A Progressive Idea
But from the very start, the primary movement was doomed to failure as a nationwide institution. In the first place, each state has a right to do as it pleases about political parties, and in the second place, professional politicians usually distrust gusts of popular opinion. They fought the primary idea from the word go.

The result: only 14 states albeit the more populous ones, have presidential primaries. In three others, Arkansas, Georgia, and Alabama, the voters may have a primary if the powers that be in the parties will let them. Alabama leaders have decided to hold a primary this year. The others are making up their minds.

That means 15 states—Alabama, California, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, West Virginia and Wisconsin, will elect their candidates to the national conventions. However, eight of the Illinois and New York delegates are picked by party committees. The District of Columbia Democrats also elect their delegates, but the Republicans do not.

Those 15 states will have a total of 42 delegates at the 1940 Democratic convention out of 1,100 and 4800 delegates to the Republican convention out of 1,000—less in each case than a majority.

All except three of the 15—Alabama, Florida, and New York—also give their voters a chance to directly express a preference for President, in addition to electing delegates of known preference. But the delegates aren't very seriously bound by the preference.

Furthermore, most of the primary systems in operation are compromises between the progressive elements in the two political parties, and professional political leaders. This means that the delegates elected to vote for certain candidates in the national conventions, may not do so beyond a few ballots. It also means that the expression by the voters of a presidential preference, where it is required under state laws is not a mandatory preference.

In other words, the delegates who happens to have the approval of the voters in his party who sent them to the national convention.

On top of all that, the professional party leaders have adopted the practice of using the primary as a testing ground for candidates and issues, fully aware that they are not bound by any such tests. That testing practice has given rise to the belief that the primary was devised as a special tool for the professional politician. Such is not the case. Progressive elements in both parties put over the primary idea. The professional politician has merely adapted it to his uses.

Popular Will Ignored

In 1912, the primaries got out of bounds in the Republican pasture. They brought out a strong popular expression for Teddy Roosevelt. The reason was the fact that Roosevelt gave the Republican Party a clear cut issue between conservatism and progressivism. The voters indicated they were thinking in progressive terms, but these signs were ignored with disastrous results at the polls. Similarly in 1940, the high pitch of interest in the spring primaries as reflected in the prominence of the headlines and the keen discussions everywhere by voters, is an indication that the primaries may again furnish high-powered spontaneous combustion with in both parties.

Despite the fact that all the candidates in the field are traveling under liberal banners, most of them have been in public life long enough for the voters to have made up their minds about each candidate's particular shade of liberalism; i. e., whether he's straight-away, left-wing, conservative, or what-not.

If the voting in both parties in the spring primaries should establish the fact that voters in primary-holding states are all thinking either in conservative or liberal directions, then the primary vote will have an important effect on the national conventions. For party leaders these days don't ignore popular signs as they did in 1912.

Likewise, the fact that the primaries are developing into free-for-all races gives them the atmosphere of a political testing ground. In short, more than a crop of favorite sons may appear. And, even though some of the more prominent candidates won't enter some of the primaries, the voters may show which candidates the voters do not want. And that's a very important item.

Stars Shine Their Brightest Feb. 23

Brilliant Constellation to Run Into March

AP Feature Service

Whatever else 1940 may bring mankind, it presents an opportunity to see a unique celestial show. Beginning about February 23 and lasting through the first week in March, the five brightest planets in the solar system will line up in a formation resembling a necklace of glowing jewels.

According to William H. Burton, Jr., executive curator of the Hayden Planetarium, New York, nobody knows when anything like it was last on view, and exactly the same formation won't appear again until after everybody now living is dead.

During the two weeks when the heavens put on their "once only" spectacle the planets Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn and Mars, in the order named, will for an undulating line, with Mercury nearest the western horizon. They will be spaced "upward" at fairly regular intervals until the Pleiades are slightly to the right. Any one possessing a small telescope will be able to make out a sixth "jewel" the "necklace," Uranus.

The chain will be visible practically all over the world right after sunset. It must be caught then, for Mercury soon enters the twilight haze and becomes hard to see. The spectacle will amount to having five evening stars on view simultaneously. During the period there will be no morning stars. The show will be at its best around February 28.

In 1946, says Burton, the morning sky will present a line-up resembling this one but it will not be so close. So you better do your stargazing this time, if at all.

Clark Gable and Carole Lombard weren't missing after all, as everybody suspected all along, including the press agent who suspected that everyone suspected the yarn.

Nazi Bombers Raid British Shipping

Clear skies over the North Sea brought renewal of Nazi plane attacks on British shipping, the newest method of anti-convoy warfare. Sweeping the 500-mile British coastline, German bombers have sunk 22,000 tons of British and neutral shipping, and killed more than 100 seamen in attacks on 75 vessels. Most ships were the 22 vessels verified as destroyed here gone down. Germany claims to have sunk many more. Figures show flying time.

Laurel and Hardy Formula Fixed, But Story and Locale Always New, As Revealed in "The Flying Deuces"

Just two dumb guys always trying to do the right thing and always doing the wrong!

That, in a sentence, is the success formula of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, now starring in "The Flying Deuces," as expounded by themselves.

The constant screen repetition of that routine has been the secret of thirteen years of cinema success—the longest of any screen comedy team.

"Hundreds of stories have been submitted to us that we've been committed to turn down," explained Hardy. "Not that they haven't sufficient elements of comedy, but because they don't fit the characters that we have established as fundamentally ours."

Both comedians insist that the moment they departed from their proven screen formula, their star-tenure would be at an end. Consequently, each is a factum of every picture. Not only do they act, but they write, help produce and aid in direction. They "eat and sleep" the picture with writers, directors and producers. They approve their supporting cast.

No jealousy exists between the two comedians, when it comes to a comedy situation. If Laurel develops a laugh, Hardy allows it a trial and doesn't hesitate to criticize if he thinks the idea shows weakness. The same goes for Laurel.

Each comedian evidences a genuine enjoyment of his partner's work. And therein, probably, lies the secret of their comedy longevity!

"We never try to depend on a funny line for a laugh," said Laurel. "We find our funniest situations develop from straight pantomime. Sometimes a line may enhance the comic situation, but we try to make our action speak louder than words."

Another demand of the team is that no similarity of plots be found in their pictures. They insist that each locale must differ from the previous picture, and prefer that several locales aid story development.

"Our current film, 'The Flying Deuces,' is enhanced by three locales—Paris, the Foreign Legion in Morocco, and Des Moines, Iowa," they point out. "The changes of background are an excellent thought on the part of Boris Morros, who produced the picture for RKO Radio."

Norway to Permit Altmark to Leave

Norway to Turn Down British Request for Internment

OSLO —(P)— Norway appeared ready to permit the stranded German prison ship Altmark to leave Norwegian waters.

Despite a British demand that the ship be interned, informed circles indicated the government would give Capt. Heinrich Doh the go-ahead signal any time he wants to lift anchor.

Captain Doh said that so far as he was informed no official restraint had been placed upon his vessel and he felt free to leave at any time with the good graces of Norwegian authorities.

He said the Altmark's propellers were broken when she was jammed against the rocky shore of Gjostingfjord Friday night during the British seizure, and that he had received no orders to reconquer her.

Captain Doh declared he had informed Norwegian inspectors of the presence of the British prisoners aboard the Altmark and that "they seemed satisfied."

The only armaments carried by the Altmark were two machine guns and when the vessel entered Norwegian waters they were stored in the hold, he insisted. "When the British made their assault these guns were inaccessible and not a pistol was shot from the German side," he declared. "We had no cannon of any description."

While serving as an auxiliary to the scuttled pocket battleship Admiral Graf Sues, Captain Doh said, the Altmark had machine guns set up for anti-aircraft defense, but never used them.

The British boarding party reported they found two pom poms and four machine guns aboard the vessel.

Feelings among Norwegians were stirred further by reports of two more blows to her shipping. The 2,250-ton steamer Hop was missing with a crew of 18 while en route to England and the 7,850-ton motorship Sangstad was mined in the North Sea. The Sangstad's crew was saved.

This, Captain Jones said Tuesday, Mrs. Henry denied emphatically. Nor does she know he added how the dead man received a deep laceration across his right hand which Dr. Cle-

ANKARA —(P)— In the midst of new military preparations by the government, the Turkish press declared Friday night any attack against the Balkans would bring Turkey into the European war.

"Turkey will enter the war the day a foreign power marches into the Balkans," the newspaper Yeni Sabah of Istanbul warned.

"Turkey is not seeking war and would fight only if imperilled," Yeni Sabah said. "If German attacks the Balkans she will find us facing her on the side of the Allies because such aggression would directly menace us. To reach Istanbul it is necessary to cross the Balkans. Our country will not await her turn with folded arms while the Balkans are crushed. That is one mistake we shall not make."

a little hot water, she went to the ancient bathroom.

Ann had the only room on the third floor of what had once been a fine old home. It was on Chicago's West Side and built before the city's elite decided upon the vicinity of Sheridan Drive as the correct address. Ann's miserable room had once quartered a servant.

"I was a few minutes past 9 when she turned down the shabby worn coverings of her thin bed. Her beauty-loving fingers resented the feel of the cotton blanket and coarse sheet. She switched off her light, opened the window. The deep, broad casement window was the room's sole redeeming feature. Ann paused beside it, as soft spring air crept up from the alley below.

She gazed at a lighted window across the way. There he was, the big, dark young man. He sat in a wooden rocking chair, his cheek resting on a clenched fist, reading steadily.

Ann knew that she should not stand in her window and gaze at the young man. It wasn't polite. Just the same, she had done it often. Not that she was romantically interested in him—Ann was not romantically inclined. She had her own ideas concerning love. It was a luxury and luxuries were not for her.

She went to bed, lying tensely quiet. Dreading sleep, she lay with her eyes open. The dream might come if she slept and the dream was a shattering thing. She was always fighting her way through a crowd on a downtown street, part of the crowd, but invisible. In the dream she was jostled this way and that, battered until she finally fell to the sidewalk, begging and pleading. Feet trampled her and she cried out.

No one heeded her cries, the feet trampled and kicked and scuffed until she awoke, sobbing her protests. Ann did not know that a psychiatrist would have credited her dream to a lonely fixation; she only knew that its recurrence was wrecking her nervous system.

She lay very still, her slim little body straight under the blanket. She was getting too thin. Eating alone, day in and day out, did not make for appetite.

Ann's hands clenched. It wasn't reasonable that a girl like herself, 20 years old, pretty enough, eager to make friends, should go on for 328 days utterly alone.

Pretty enough? That was putting it much too mildly. Ann had shining bronze hair, its golden high lights and lovely wave had been lavishly granted by nature. Her eyes were dark gray, wide and childish, her red mouth curved deliciously.

Sometimes Ann wondered how long she would continue to walk alone, how soon, for sheer want of companionship, she would respond to the masculine advances which constantly came her way.

She tried to think of pleasant things. Her job—only $15 a week but just $15 better than nothing. There had been a rather dreadful time before she got the job. She was lucky that her fingers were clever enough to turn shapeless old brass into smart creations. Her new dress—the picture in the paper was stunning, it would be lovely for spring. Ann moved restlessly. The dress would be lovely but—where would she wear it? Who cared whether or not her clothes were lovely? Drowsiness crept over her.

SUDDENLY Ann was screaming. She was sitting up in the thin bed, a trembling hand pressed over her mouth to stop the screams. She had been under trampling feet, smothered, crushed—

"I heard you scream," Paul said... "Well—good night."

"Say — something wrong over there?"

Ann's frightened face turned to the window. Pale yellow light shone from across the alley she crouched under the blanket, still held by the horror of the dream.

"Say—what goes on?"

Ann slid out of bed, her little feet hunting slippers, her hand reaching for a robe. She stumbled to the window and leaned out.

"Nothing goes on," she quavered. The young man leaned from his window, outlined clearly by a shaft of moonlight. The two windows were not more than 30 feet apart.

"Are you there? I can't see you."

"I'm here."

"I heard you scream."

Ann tried to laugh. It was a shaken little sound. "I had a bad dream," she confessed.

"Oh, I say—that's a shame. All right now?"

"Yes—all right now." She was crying, not because of the dream, but because of the rich sympathy in the young man's voice. It was as if his voice lifted her out of the way of the trampling feet.

"Well—good night."

"Good night and—and thank you."

ANN was restless and blind awake. Pulling down the window, she switched on the light which dangled from the ceiling. She made a cup of cocoa and drank it slowly. Still in no mood for sleep, she sat down with the paper, turning to the personal column. Ann often read the intimate little items, they gave her a vicarious contact with the humming world about her. Her eyes slid downward and stopped at the word, "Lonely." It was followed by a number, K295.

"Refined gentleman wishes to make a friend," she read. "If interested please write."

If Ann had found the phrase, "Object matrimony," she would not have given the personal another thought. But Lonely—it caught her interest. Someone else found the city a friendless place.

If the writer were only a girl—More than anything else Ann wanted a girl friend, someone with whom she could laugh and talk and go to the movies. A refined gentleman—well, a refined gentleman might be better than no one at all. Lonely—the pity of being lonely, the dreadful, heart-breaking pity.

Ann read the item again and again. Her cheeks grew flushed. She found paper and pen and ink, crushed—

(To Be Continued)

It Took Hollywood a Year to "Discover" Greer Garson!

Sensitive Irish actress had to travel 6,000 miles back to England to score in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," before her acting brilliance was recognized—now she has completed her first American picture, "Remember?" and producers are clamoring for her services.

Greer Garson, the red-haired, green-eyed lady who entered Hollywood's back door by way of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," a film, incidentally, which she felt would not enhance her reputation, provides a background as colorful as it is intriguing. An Irish girl, born in County Down in the North of Ireland, she received her stage training in the English provincial and London's smart West End theatres but, oddly enough, was hailed by London critics as a "New American Actress" in her first starring role.

"The notices were gratifying, if surprising," Miss Garson said. "While I had no desire to masquerade as an American girl, I could not help but feel that it helped be immeasurably to get a start. It is a well-known fact that an American actress in London is much more likely to receive kinder treatment and less critical scrutiny than a humdrum hometown girl. It is a matter of simple psychology and human nature. The other side of the fence always looks greener. This holds true for the English actor in New York. And, of course, later, there was another favorable reaction when my true nationality came to be known."

Whiz at Dialects

Miss Garson's unqualified success as an American girl is explained by the fact that she is a whiz at dialects and a keen observer. This was evidenced earlier in her professional stage debut at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre. She played Shirley Kaplan in "Street Scene," winning a blag wig. The critical reaction on this occasion is amusing. It was agreed that Miss Garson was entirely capable in the role but, unfortunately, strictly limited in the type of characters she could play. Her nationality, it was reported, was a definite barrier to parts of wider scope.

Further light is shed on Miss Garson's knack of donning the cloak of any nationality with ease by her own admission that, "I have been acting as long as I can remember." This trait came to the surface when she was four and was permitted to speak a piece in the village town hall. Warmly by the applause, she returned to the stage uninvited, repeating the recitation to her own intense satisfaction if not that of the audience.

This inceptant interest in things theatrical both horrified and profoundly shocked her family. A doughty grandparent once remarked, "I would rather see her in her grave than on the stage." Both the Greens and the Garsons ran to academic types, parsons, doctors and elders of the kirk. This had not always been so and is a key to Miss Garson's rebellion. Her father, George Garson, was born in the Orkney Isles, early historical stamping ground of Eric the Red and His Norse warriors. She is extremely proud of being an Orcadian. Her given name, Greer, is no press agent invention, but is her mother's maiden name and a contraction of McGregor. It seems that in the days of Rob Roy McGregor, some of the McGregor clan went in for cattle stealing on the side. Discovered, they fled to the North of Ireland, taking the name of Greer. From them, apparently, came Miss Garson's determination to become an actress.

Next Invade London

Miss Garson had played leading roles for two seasons at Birmingham, then sought wider fields to conquer. She secured an engagement touring the provinces in the George Bernard Shaw play, "Too Good to Be True." The critics added to her Birmingham clip-ons, but the dual role of a white and native girl, with necessary costume and make-up changes in drafty dressing rooms, brought on an attack of tonsillitis. After the offending tonsils had been removed and she had spent several dreary weeks in a hospital Miss Garson decided to stake everything on a nan invasion of London.

Armed with my scrapbook of clip-ons," she said, "I went through all the usual discouragements common to young actresses. Producers would not see me. I remembered all the dire predictions of my friends who were unanimous in thinking me foolish for ever going on the stage."

One night Miss Garson dined alone in the University Women's Club in despair. While she was toying with her food for which she had no appetite, Sylvia Thompson, the novelist, approached, introduced herself, and said, "I understand you are an actress. I have just written a play. I believe you are the girl for the lead. Will you do it?"

They approached, introduced herself, and said, "I understand you are an actress. I have just written a play. I believe you are the girl for the lead. Will you do it?"

Defense Problems Studied By F. D. R.

ABOARD THE USS LANG, AT SEA —(P)—(Via. wireless)—Still studying problems of inter-American defense, President Roosevelt studied the Pacific waters Tuesday in the vicinity of the Panama Canal Zone.

During the afternoon he dropped his studies long enough to try sail-fishing from the USS Tuscaloosa his cruise ship, near small islands off the Costa Rican coast.

The time of the president's return trip through the canal was not revealed.

President Augusto Boyd of Panama will accompany Mr. Roosevelt on the return through the locks, at which time the president plans to confer again with Canal Zone naval, military and aviation officials.

It is said that the population of Finland had sunk to less than 250,000 in 1721.

But Finland survived, stood two additional wars (between Russia and Sweden) in the 18th century, increased in population to 750,000. At the century's close Finland was largely Swedish property and had begun to develop one of its chief resources—timber. At about the same time the Finns began to think of independence.

But it was not to come. For a little man, Napoleon, was determined to close the Baltic to the British and Finland was to be his pawn.
